PATENT GAS FIRE,

FOR STEAM BOAT.

A CONCENTRATED FUEL for Steam-Boats has been invented, consisting of Tar or other carbonaceous substance, commingled with Steam,

The apparatus is simple; the management easy and safe. It is a great auxiliary to a wood or coal fire, which it both enlivens, encreases and saves—for it seems to combine so rapidly with the oxygen of the air, as to prevent the wood from wasting or consuming so fast as usual, the blaze, notwithstanding, being very active and intense.

The apparatus consists of a double vessel of copper or iron, cylindrical, lying on its side, upon or rather between the boilers, if there are 2.

Tar, Turpentine, Rosin, Spirits, Oil, or other combustible fluid, being put into the inner one, steam is allowed to flow from the boiler through a pipe and cock into the space between and thro' a few holes on the upper side of the inner one to press on the surface of the tar, which being heated by the surrounding steam, is at pleasure driven out through a small pipe (having a stop cock) meeting and uniting with another pipe leading out steam from the space between—the continuation of the pipe then leads to the fire or flue. The longer this pipe (it kept hot) the better. It need not be more than a quarter of an inch in diameter.

In its way the tar is extremely attenuated and mingling with the steam. Some chemists are of opinion that by the attraction of its carbon, it decomposes the steam into the constituents of water, oxygen and hydrogen, and combines with them to form the highly inflamable Gasses, carbonic-acid and carburetted hydrogen, or if not thus formed in the pipe, they are produced at or near the fire, or in the chamber where it burns, in a tenth of an inch diameter for a boiler of considerable size.

The only art in management, is to graduate the flow of the tar and steam to such proportion as that neither shall appear to predominate, and in taking care that the fluid be previously strained so as not to obstruct the pipe by any extraneous particles. This will easily be done by placing a seive over the reservoir, from which a pipe (having a stop cock) leads into one end of the tar vessel. There is of course a safety valve and a stop cock to draw the condensed steam from between the two vessels, formed there in the beginning of the operation, while the tar was at a low temperature. Its position on the boilers will, however soon heat it. Tar boils only at a much higher temperature than water—there is therefore no danger from it.

The advantages of this kind of fuel will be very great in long passages. No steam boat or vessel can navigate the Ocean without it; and it will be found economical and convenient in every situation.

Being of recent origin, it has not been put in practice in many instances, but in several, under my own observation, and witnessed by many persons, its effects are admirable.

This advertisement is intended to offer its use gratis to a few boats, whose proprietors shall first obtain a licence. The price of this improvement afterwards will be several thousand dollars per boat, which it will be found economical in most situations to pay. The patent right for local use will be for sale after its value shall be further tested.

Licences to use this invention will be granted by

JOHN L. SULLIVAN,
Assignee of the patent of Samuel Morey

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 6, 1819.

The Anonymous,

No. IV.

We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;
Our wiser sons will no doubt think us so.
POPE.

It was my fortune, a few evenings since, to be admitted to a snug coterie of old ladies, who, when their imaginations were enlivened & their memories quickened by the steam arising from copious libations of imperial tea, broke forth into a most learned, eloquent and sarcastic discussion on the manners and customs of the present day; condemning them without a reservation by a comparison with those of their youth. Alas, worthy souls, thought I, just so said your grandmothers before you. Could I have presumed to utter an opinion in their venerable presence, or thought it not utterly useless, I would have uttered two words that would explain the cause of their philippic against the present age—"you were then young, and with regret I say it, you have your prejudices, and so indeed have your grand children."

"Ah," said a venerable old lady, who had witnessed the mortifying dereliction of three generations, from the "good old customs," "the dress of our young females is ridiculous and outre beyond expression, utterly devoid of that grace, dignity and elegance that characterized my days"—and if, thinks I to myself, the females of the present day, heaven bless them, by the blandishment of high heel'd shoes, and those towering head dresses that rivalled the pyramids of Egypt, are reduced, as yon say, comparatively to pigmies, but as I think to epitomies of loveliness; they have far out stripped the most extreme fashion of your days, by the almost interminable projection of their bonnets, that were undoubtedly modelled by the covering of a Conestoga waggon; so that provided you are a few paces distant, and precisely in front, you may occasionally view the "human face divine," beaming like the mild s ar of evening through a telescope; a sparkling diamond at the bottom of a well the visionary forms of the enchanting kaleidoscope; the smiles of cherub hope beaming through the vista of despair; or the beauteous queen of night shedding her milder, lovelier beams through her misty veil. No, my dear madam, you cannot deny, if you will only divest yourself of early prejudices, and the feelings of old age, no easy task it must be confess present day are far better calculated to display the grace and loveliness of the loveliest form in creation, than those of your times. Compare, for instance, the faces of our belles, blended, softened and modestly screened by a multiplicity of curls, and a far projecting bonnet; to the full moon faces exposed to the vulgar gaze in your times, when it was the fashion to drag the hair over a pile of cushions, rising "like Alps piled upon Alps," until, it is true, the eye brows were tortured into the arch so much admired; but the hapless victim of fashion was rendered utterly incapable of closing her eyes in balmy sleep, until a servant mounted a table, and by loosening the braces suffered the eyelids to fall. How often when pensively gazing upon the portrait of my great-great-grand mother, who, even in her days, "towered above her sex," with her mild enchanting blue eyes, dragged wide open, in order to arch her brows; how often have I wondered what possibly could have been substituted in those days, for that most touching and irrisistible of all expressions, the downcast eye. When the lids are almost closed, and, as a poet would say, "the liquid lustre of this star of promise, beams through its silken screen, joys brightest day upon the lovers heart;" assuring him in the language of the soul, that his love was reciprocated. Was a squeeze of the hand, or a modest salutation the sub-stitute? alas for the beaus of that day, the wide spreading hoop that kept the most presuming at the distance of three paces, rendered these impossible. How then are our great-great grandfathers to be pitied for the privations of these extatic pleasures, by the torturing tyranny of fashion. Oh! that our worthy ancestors should have so far forgot the respect they owed themselves, and their exemplary duties to their descendents, as to suffer the impertinent whims of taylors, barbers and milliners to deck them in costumes so fantastic and outre, to our conceptions, that it is impossible even for their gravest offspring to look upon their venerable portraits without a smile; and at which those less scrupulous and respectful, have not hesitated to burst forth into a horse laugh at the full bottomed wig, broad skirts and ponderous sleeves of the "quizzical old Don." Surely it is a deplorable evil that the sight of our ancestors that should fill us with repect, veneration, & a desire to imitate, should by the fatal influence of those Harlequins of fashion, who apparently, made dressing dolls and barbers blocks of them for the purpose of attracting customers by their fantastic decorations, rather than to improve & adorn their persons, should produce risibility, and a desire in their perverse descendants to fly into the opposite extreme. Thus for the full bottommed wig that covered their shoulders as the mane of the lordly lion, they have substituted the close cut crop—for the broad brimmed hat, which they, simple souls, thought a necessary protection from the sun, rain, and sleet, their wiser children have substituted a something they call a hat, with a rim of half an inch, and the broad skirts that twice enveloped the rotundity of the "old Don," has tapered gradually off, and is daily assimilating to the tail of a certain animal, to which they have been compared, but which I had rather not name. But lest the contraction of the coat might be attributed to economical saving, antiquated and absolete, the modern dandy has thrown the superfluous cloth once appropriated to the broad skirts and hanging sleeves of his grand-father, into his pantaloons; thus making them resemble the skirt of a female riding habit, so that should he be painted at full length which is very likely, as every thing but coats and charity are done upon a large scale, in spite of his whiskers he may be taken by his descendents for an equestrian figure of their grand-mother. Think of this ye minions of fashion, ye who confound the costume of the sexes, with your stays and corsetts, ye whose habits are daily deteriorating, think of the mortification that some impertinent grand-son, revenging the impertinence of your remarks on his great-grand-father, may say to his companion, "look here, Tom, is the portrait of my grand-mother, did you ever see such a fantastic quizzical figure? the women in those days wore whiskers, Tom!

From the Detroit Gazette.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA, OF THE Territory of Michigan.

From the commencement to the close of the revolutionary war, little of interest is presented to the notice of the historian. Remote from the scenes of action, and separated by an immense wilderness the people of this territory had probably little direct agency in the affairs of the revolutionary war, and from its close, in 1782, the British continued to hold the territory, together with several posts on the American side of the Lakes, until 1796, when, in pursuance of Jay's treaty, this country was delivered up to the United States—but previous to Indian tribes with various success, during which occurred the defeat of Col. Crawford, at Upper Sandusky, in 1789; of General Harman, on the Scioto, in 1791, and of General St. Clair, in the latter part of the same year, near Fort Jefferson. The Indians, emboldened by these frequent advantages began to increase their depredations and incursions upon the frontier settlements on the Ohio, and began to assume so serious an aspect that Congress raised a force of five thousand men, and Gen. Wayne was appointed Commander in Chief, in room of Gen. St. Clair who had resigned. While preparations were making, attempts at negociation were renewed, and Col Harden and Major Freeman were sent into the Indian country with proposals of peace; they failed, and both were inhumanly murdered by the Indians. At length, on the 8th of August, 1791, Gen. Wayne with his army reached the confluence of the Miami and Auglaize, where he halted and threw up some works of defence;—being about thirty miles from the British post on the Miami of the lakes, in the vicinity of which the Indians were collected to the number of about 2000. The legion commanded by Wayne was at this time of about equal force, exclusive of 1100 mounted men from Kentucky, under Gen. Scott. From the 14th to the 20th Gen. Wayne cautiously advanced down the Miami, and on the latter day a general and decisive action took place. The Indians were posted behind trees, and the General directed his legion to advance with trailed arms, and with their bayonets to drive the enemy from their shelter, and then deliver their fire. So rapid was the charge and so entirely were the enemy broken, that in the course of one hour they were driven more than two miles. The general pursued them, burnt their houses, and laid waste their corn fields within pistol shot of the British fort This victory had so decisive an effect, that General Wayne was enabled to conclude a treaty with the hostile Indians at Greenville, on the 3d of August, 1795, & soon after the posts of Detroit and Michillimackinac were delivered to the Americans. Immediately after the surrender of these posts, in 1796, this territory fell under the government and formed a part of the territory north west of the Ohio. After the admission of Ohio into the Union as an independent state, this territory and Indiana became the North-Western territory, until they were separated and formed two distinct territories, in 1806, this by the name and title of the Territory of Michigan, over which William Hull was appointed governor, and Detroit became the seat of government.

Nothing of importance occurs in the history of this territory until after the commencement of the war with Great Britain, in June 1812. Gen. Hull having been appointed a brigadier general in May, left the city of Washington for Detroit, with orders from the War Department anticipating the declaration of war. He was clothed with discretionary powers to commence operations in Canada, as soon as the declaration of war should reach him, if in his opinion his force would warrant him.—On his rout through the state of Ohio he was joined by three regiments, who had enrolled themselves under the proclamation of the President—they were commanded by Colonels M'Arthur, Cass and Finlay. On his arrival with his army at the Miami of the Lake, he dispatched his hospital stores and the baggage of the officers on board a schooner for Detroit, but the enemy having had information of the declaration of war, the vessel with the property was captured at Malden.

On the 12th of July, Gen. Hull having made the preliminary preparations, passed over into Canada and established his head-quarters at Sandwich, and on the same day issued his famous proclamation, in which he announced his force to be the van guard of a much greater, and invited the Canadians to join his standard or remain quiet; assuring them of protection. At this time the enemy's force at Malden was very diminutive, and their works of defence in a weak and unfinished state; had general Hull advanced immediately upon Malden, it is believed he would have met with very little opposition; on the contrary, by his vacillating policy and the petit querre which he carried on, so little comporting with the high ground he had taken in his proclamation, and so far short of the prompt and decisive movements which were expected from so respectable a force, that the enemy after their first alarm had subsided began to gather confidence, which, as the character of general Hull was gradually developed, continued to increase. The army lay inactive from the 12th of July to the 8th of August, nothing having been attempted but to send out small detachments to reconnoitre the enemy and secure the passage of the bridge aux Canard; a few miles above Malden on the road to that place. On one of those expeditions, commanded by Col. Cass, the guard at the bridge were surprized, and with difficulty effected their retreat.—The capture of the bridge secured a passage to Malden. Nothing, however, seems to have been further from the mind of the General than to have availed himself of this opportunity of advancing, and he appeared to be waiting for a plausible [illegible] pretext was not long wanted. Lieut. Hanks, a brave and intelligent officer, had been entrusted with the command of Michilimackinac, but owing to the unpardonable neglect or treachery of those whose duty it was to have forwarded the information, was not, until the 9th of July, informed that the United States were at war with England; and was then only informed of it by finding himself closely invested by a body of British regulars Canadian militia and Indians, amounting to 1000 men, under Capt. Roberts, who had seized on an eminence and erected a battery in the night, which would have completely raked the parade ground within the Fort. Under such circumstances he found himself compelled to capitulate. and the garrison, amounting to 57, including officers, surrendered prisoners of war.

On the eighth of August, Gen. Hull determined to return Detroit. When this was announced to the army it was received with universal surprise and disgust. The volunteers who had so early enrolled themselves under the banner of their country from motives of purest patriotism—who had left their homes (many of them of ease and affluence) to encounter the toils and privations of a long and tedious march through a wilderness country, supported by the hope that they should immediately be led to meet the enemies of their country, could scarcely restrain their indignant feelings within the limits of subordination.

WONDERFUL!—Incredible as the following account may, appear, we can assure our readers that it is an indisputable fact, inasmuch as the number of birds killed was satisfactorily ascertained by three respectable men, who counted the number, as well as the corroborative testimony of near a hundred different persons, who went expressly to see them. The following is a brief statement as it occurred.

On Wednesday last the, 19th instant, (May) at the house of Silas Preston, in Plumbstead township, Bucks county, a considerable noise wss heard in the chimney—the female part of the family became alarmed, and sent for Mr. Preston. It was ascertained that the noise was occasioned by the entrance of an innumerable body of chimney birds into a chimney, in which, probably no fire had been made for many years. Mr. Preston, accompanied by one or two persons, repaired to the roof of the house, and by forcing waggon covers down the chimney propelled them into the room, where they killed to the number of Four th[illegible] and two hundred and thirty.

What adds to the singularity of the above fact, is, that they were apparently all old birds, and appeared to form a complete chain in the chimney of extraordinary thickness, and reaching nearly from the top to the bottom. The birds are yet visible in the adjoining field. Impossible as it first seems to many, all now appear to be satisfied of its correctness, and more than five persons are ready & willing to be qualified to the fact.

HALLOWELL, June 12.

Singular Fatality by Lightning.

Two men were killed by lightning in Woolwich, on the 7th inst. They had retired to bed in the garret, containing two beds, the head of each standing against the chimney, together with two others; the lightning killed one man in each bed; the other two escaped unhurt!

The lightning passed into the chamber below, where an old lady was reading her bible, with her hands on the leaves and fingers spread open, it passed through her fingers burning two of them, and the corners of half a dozen leaves of the bible; thence it descended to the lower room, where a man was sleeping on an iron bound chest, it stove the chest to pieces, the man receiving no material injury.—There were 28 people in the house.

By permission of the author, we copy the following article relative to the navigation and commerce of this place, from a work now in the press, entitled, "Sketches of Louisville and its environs," by Dr. H. M'Murtrie. This work has been the result of considerable labour and research, and will, we have reason to believe, be an acceptable treat to the intelligent part of the community. It is an able and impartial production, and will impart to the reader an accurate knowledge of the history, topography, and the local, political and commercial importance of this place.—*Louisv. NAVIGATION & COMMERCE.

"The increase of the navigation and commerce of Louisville and Shipping-port, since the year 1806, is perhaps unparalleled in the history of nations. At that time six keel-boats and two barges, the one of thirty tons, belonging to Reed of Cincinnati, the other of forty, owned by Instone, of Frankfort, sufficed for the carrying trade of the two places, whereas at the present moment, there are (exclusive of barges, keels, &c.) upwards of twenty five steam-boats employed in that business, whose united burthen is equal to six thousand and fifty tons! This is a flattering and unequivocal proof of their prosperity, and gives us a glimpse of what they will be in fifty years hence.

The application of steam to the purposes of navigation, constitutes a brilliant & important era in the annals of our country, and although Fulton was not the original inventor, (for it had been repeatedly essayed before his time, in England, France and this country, but without success) yet is his merit not the less on that account, as it requires more courage to persevere in effecting a purpose, which, from the constant failure of others, seems to be impracticable, than to try a new experiment. 'Why has he not a statue?

Next to Fulton the western country owes a vast debt to capt. H. M. Shreves, of Portland. It is to his exertions, his example, and, let me add, to his integrity & patriotic purity of principle, that it is indebted for the present flourishing state of its navigation. Having been long convinced that the overpowering patent of Fulton and Livingston, which granted them the exclusive privilege of navigating by steam-boats all the rivers of the United States, for fourteen years, no matter in what manner that steam operated, was illegal, and consequently of no effect, he determined to bring the point to issue, and accordingly, on the 1st of December, 1814, he embarked in the Enterprize, for N. Orleans, where he arrived on the 14th of same month. Immediately on landing, he applied to counsel, and procured bail, in case of seizure, which took place the ensuing day. Bail was entered, and a suit commenced against the vessel and owners, by the company, in an inferior court, & here a verdict was found for the defendants. The cause was now removed by a writ of error, to the supreme court of the United States, at which time the Enterprise left New-Orleans and arrived at Shipping-port.

Before the question was decided by this tribunal, capt. Shreves returned to N. Orleans with the Washington, a beautiful boat of 400 tons, which, (as expected) was also seized by the company, to whom she was abandoned without any difficulty. Upon application, however, to the court, an order was obtained to hold it (the company) to bail, to answer the damages that might be sustained by the detention of the vessel; to this it demurred, and, beginning to feel the weakness of its case and forseeing the downfall of its colossal patent, it repeatedly offered (both thro' the medium of its attornies and by its members, personally,) to admit captain Shreve to an equal share with itself, in all the privileges of the patent right, provided he would instruct his counsel to arrange the business that a verdict might be found against him!!! In vain the tempting bait (I had almost said bribe) was proffered. It was rejected with scorn and indignation, and the affair left to justice, whose sword, at one blow, severed the links of that chain which had enthralled the commerce of the western waters. Had captain Shreves been weak enough to have acepted of this offer, the result is obvious. No one would have dared to embark his fortunes in vain endeavours to promote the best interests of his country, by adding the wings of commerce to the feet of agriculture, because ruin would have been the inevitable consequence; the carrying business would have remained in the hands of the company, who would have continued just as many and no more boats in the trade than was sufficient to keep up the price of freight, &, consequently, instead of paying two and a half cents per lb. for every article of import, the merchant, and ultimately the consumer, would have been compelled to have paid six, or eight, as best suited the convenience of the company.

PITTSBURGH.

Tuesday, July 6, 819.

In modern times the idea of ghosts is scouted from, & ridiculed in all enlightened circles; it appears to be forgotten, that the best authors amongst the Greeks and Romans, that historians the most respected for their veracity and philosophy attest their existence. Plutarch informs us, that Brutus 'being in his tent at night a little before the battle of Philippi, saw a horrible figure, as of a man of extraordinary size and dreadful countenance, which at first alarmed him; but finding that the phantom remained immovable without speaking, near his couch, he demanded its business; the figure replied 'I am thy evil genius, & you shall see me again at Philippi;' I shall see you then, answered Brutus, and the apparition immediately disappeared. The night before the battle the same figure stood before him without speaking; Brutus knew from this that his hour was come.' Pliny the younger in his letters states as a fact, the history of the philosopher Athenodorus, who having purchased in Athens a deserted house, which no person would inhabit on account of a spectre that appeared every night, waited boldly for the arrival of this disagreeable visitor; it soon entered, dragging after it a heavy chain, and made a sign to Athenodorus to follow it. The philosopher being at that moment busy, requested it to wait a little; the ghost redoubled his noise and Athenodorus taking up his lamp followed it, and was conducted into the yard; the phantom here disappeared. Athenodorus marked the spot. The next day he returned with some magistrates, who on removing the earth, found the bones of a human being surrounded by chains.—They were collected, and received funeral honours; the house was ever after perfectly quiet.

There are still more recent examples of great respectability; a very particular one is contained in the Memoirs of the celebrated Agrippa D'Aubinge; grandfather of Madame de Maintenon, so well known for his devotion to Calvanism, for sincerity and for unbending integrity. He had lately lost his mother. 'I was lying awake in bed (says he) when I heard some person enter my room; on looking up, I saw by my bed side, a female, white as snow, whose dress touched my curtains. She drew back the curtains, bent over me, gave me a kiss, and as ice, and disappeared.'

TREATY WITH SPAIN.

The Baltimore Federal Gazette of yesterday noticing the report in circulation of the Messenger bearing the treaty with Spain being robbed on his road to Madrid, states, "We are fortunately acquainted with facts from a source that may be relied on, which prove that this story is unfounded. A letter has been received from a young gentleman, formerly of this city, now in Lisbon, in which he mentions the receipt of a letter from the gentleman who was the Bearer of the treaty sent by the Spanish Minister here to his own government, announcing his safe arrival at Madrid, where he had experienced some distinguished marks of favour from the King of Spain:"—So another fabrication goes to "the tomb of the Capulets."

OUR NAVAL SQUADRON

Under Com. PERRY. The public attention has for some days back, been drawn to the object of this expedition which is to consist of the Ontario, John Adams, the Constellation and Peacock, it being well understood that they will be dispatched from our coast under sealed orders. This circumstance has of course given rise to a variety of conjectures, as to the destination of our little fleet. One says they are intended to pass along the gulph and thread the West Indies in search of piratical cruizers; another that they are to steer to the coast of Africa to aid in putting a stop to the illicit trade in slaves; and a third that they will separate in a certain latitude for different destinations, and that a part of the force will then sail for the Pacific Ocean. Without pretending to any further information than what is communicated by mere rumour, we will not submit any opinion on this head, but merely observe, that any of the above objects are of sufficient importance to demand the vigilant attention of our navy; and that the presence of a squadron, as for example, in the Mediterranean, has always had a salutary effect, and most likely to uphold our national honor, in its pristine vigor; besides affording an excellent school for the acquirement of nautical knowledge and discipline for our officers, so liable to be contaminated by that inactivity and indolence inseparable from the indulgence of a home life, and an absence from the element where they are destined to act upon.

DETROIT, May 26.

Indian Outrage.——Last Wednesday evening, a man who was at work near the house of Mr. Thomas Sargent on the river Rouge, went to Mr. Sargent's to get a loaf of bread; after leaving the house he was met by a small party of Indians, who demanded the bread, which he refused—a scuffle ensued, which was heard by Mr. Sargeant, who immediately went to the assistance of the man, and while endeavoring to release him from those who were striving for the bread, an Indian levelled a gun at him which missed fire. On seeing the attempt of the Indian to shoot him, Mr. Sargeant retreated towards his house, but was fired upon and severely wounded between his shoulders by a charge of shot. Several men have been sent in pursuit of the offender.

Since the above was in type we have been informed, that the men who pursued the Indians came up with them yesterday—that they fired on the pursuers, & that in attempting to escape, two of the Indians were killed, one of whom was the Indian who wounded Mr. Sargeant; six others were taken prisoners, and two others made their escape.

Hydrophobia.—It gives us much pleasure to state, that James Cann,* carpenter, 108, Henry street, who was, in the early part of the present month, bitten by a dog unquestionably mad, & who showed unequivocal symptoms that hydrophobia had actually begun, is now, by taking increased doses of a strong decoction of the Scull-cap, so far recovered that all those symptoms have disappeared, and he is considered out of danger. A statement of his case will shortly be drawn up by his two physicians, and published in this paper, and this statement shall be accompanied with some others, that will satisfy every impartial mind of the virtues of this divine plant.

* This is the man alluded to in the Gazette, as labouring under all the horrors of hydrophobia.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in N. York, to his friend in this city.

'Jacob Barker's Bank is shut up this day, in consequence of a heavy run upon him yesterday to meet the Washington and Warren Bank Notes, which he met in specie at 50 per cent discount; there is a great mob around his closed Bank, and constables are fixed to prevent its being gutted, as many fear will be the case.'—*Balt. DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.—A gentleman of intelligence who has made the subject of manufactures his particular study, has lately given us the following statement, which may be regarded as an interesting demonstration that manufactures can be well supported in our country. He states that in the town of Waltham, Massachusetts, there are 300 people employed in the manufacture of cotton cloth, of whom 14 are men, & the remainder women and children. That they spin 450,000 pounds of cotton, which makes 1,250,000 yards of cloth worth 25 cents per yard. Admitting the cotton to cost 18 cents per lb. would leave $231,555 to support the establishment. From this our informant draws the conclusion that these 300 people earn as much as could be produced by 3000 negroes in the raising of cotton. The subject is well worthy the investigation of those who have access to proper information.

Long-wharf at Lake Erie.—"The works in our harbour," says a letter from Buffaloe, "will be commenced the present season. It is contemplated to build out a pier or wharf about 1000 feet into that bay, to prevent the sand from accumulating at the mouth of Buffaloe creek. When this is done any number of vessels may ride in perfect safety in the creek, and a great expense will be saved in loading and unloading. Several ware-houses on an extensive scale are to be erected the ensuing summer; and, notwithstanding the general depression felt by all men in business, improvement is making 'giant strides.'

A duel was fought on the 17th inst. on Noodle's Island (Boston harbor,) by Midshipmen Van Brent and Walker, of the Independence, 74. Van Brent was shot through the body, the ball passing from the right side out of the left, through the lower part of the lungs. His case is doubtful, but hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The keel of a 74 gun ship was laid at the Navy yard, in Portsmouth, N. H. last week.

We have had the perusal of the Muster Roll of the U. States' ship Franklin, Commodore Stewart, at present in the Mediterranean.—Her full complement consists of 777 souls; and what is equally surprising and pleasing is, that out of this great number, there are but ten on the sick list. This circumstance is certainly highly creditable to the discipline and economy of the ship's police.

It is stated in the Poughkeepsie Journal of Wednesday last, that Col. John Storm of the town of Fishkill, has, this season, sheared a full-blooded Merino EWE, the fleece of which weighed Eighteen and a Half Pounds! The Ewe was four years old, and had never before been shorn. The wool is of a very fine quality, and from Sixteen to Eighteen inches in length!

The Irish have recently made some experiments upon the flos of nettles, for the manufacture of thread and linen; and the result is said to be, that both these articles are obtained equal, if not superior to the thread & linen from flax.

Air Jacket.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. Charles Kendal made an experiment on the Thames, of the efficacy of his Air-Jacket or life preserver, which completely succeeded. He went from the Southwark bridge through London bridge with great ease, and on to the London docks in twenty minutes, walking upright in the water he and his man all the way.

A new Theory of the Rainbow.—Doctor Watt of Glassgow, has accounted for this brilliant phenomenon in a new way. The common explanation is, that the drops of rain act as a prism, and divide the rays of the Sun; but as the rainbow is frequently seen in a quarter where no rain is falling, and as the edge of a cloud is, at such times, always observed between the beholder and the Sun, Dr. Watt thinks that the rays of the latter are refracted from the edge, and thrown on the dark sky opposite. This does not seem so much like a new theory as a modification of the old. It still produces the rainbow from the refraction of drops of rain; and the fact that colours are thrown upon the sky in a quarter where there is no rain, may be considered as an accidental occurence.—ib.

A Presentment!—The Grand Jury, from the county of St. Louis, Missouri Territory, at the Circuit Court last April, presented the Congress of the United States, for an attempt to restrict the State in the free exercise of its rights in the formation of a constitution, and form of government for itself;—that 'it is an unconstitional and unwarrantable usurpation of power, and our undeniable rights and privileges, as a free people.'—We shall be impatient to learn the sentence which the court may award against them.

The National Intelligencer is against a call of Congress—against a suspension of specie payments—and against a change of the tariff.

It is believed he sold him in the upper part of the city. These facts are published at once to caution the person who may have bought the dog, and to say that we will give Ten Dollars for the name of the Wretch who has thus outraged all the feelings of humanity. Gretna Green Marriage.—In one of the Appeal Cases which came on at the Easter Session of Carlisle, the curious process of Gretna Green Marriage was detailed.

'The love-struck swain met with the object of his passion at Carlisle Fair, and an immediate trip to Springfield, alias Gretna Green was agreed upon. In order to be merry as well as wise, they took a fiddler along with them, and with a young man whom they accidently met on Carlisle bridge, arrived at the sacred spot. They were ushered with due ceremony into the presence of his Reverence the Priest, who commenced the business by enquiring of the lovers if they had a ring? and being answered in the negative, he asked the bridegroom if he had any 'bacco? in this point he was more fortunate. A 'bacco box was then produced, and the Priest twined a ring of the 'bacco, and put it upon the woman's finger. He recollected this very well, for the 'bacco ring fell off, and the Priest took it up, and again putting it on the bride's finger, said a few words and they were married. The Priest then gave the woman a piece of paper called marriage lines. This was brought forward as evidence to prove the marriage and consummation; but it appeared in evidence the man afterwards repented of his bargain, for he endeavoured to take the 'bit of paper from his bride by force, in order to destroy it.' London pap.

GEORGE III.

At the conclusion of the revolutionary war, John Adams, Esq. was appointed minister plenipotentiary at the court of St. James. When he was, according to etiquette, introduced after the levee was over, to the King's closet, he made a speech to his majesty; in performing which he appeared considerably agitated. When he had finished, the King is said to have replied as follows:

Sir, the whole of this business is so extraordinary, that the fine feelings you discover upon the occasion appear to me to be just and proper. I wish, sir, to be clearly understood, before I reply to the very obliging sentiments you have expressed in behalf of the United States of America. I was, you may well suppose, sir, the last person in England that consented to the dismemberment of the empire by the Independence of the United States; and while the war was continued, I thought it due to my subjects to prosecute that war to the utmost; sir, I have consented to their independence, and it is ratified by treaty; and I now receive you as their minister plenipotentiary, and every attention, respect and protection granted to other plenipotentiaries, you shall receive at this court. And, sir, as I was the last person that consented to the independence of the United States, so I shall be the last person to disturb, or, in any manner, to infringe upon their sovereign independent rights; and I hope and trust, that from blood, religion, manners, intercourse, and almost every other consideration, the two nations will continue for ages in friendship and confidence with each other.

Ladies Literary Cabinet.

To the Electors of Allegeny county.

AS I have been placed before the public as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF at our next election, with my full approbation, and as hints have been given in some parts of the county, that I had given up the idea of standing a poll, I consider it a duty I owe myself to state thus publicly, that I have not declined. The duties of a very confining business have prevented me from making that personal declaration to my fellow citizens, which has become usual on these occasions, yet I trust, that as my whole life has been passed in this county, sufficient information as to my qualifications or unfitness for the office, may be easily acquired by any individual who may think fit to make the enquiry. If the citizens of Allegheny shall think proper to favor me with their voice on the day of election, I shall feel highly gratified, for more reasons than one; if another of the candidates be preferred to me, I shall acquiesce without a murmur, convinced that every member of our society ought to exercise independently, the full right of suffrage.

25,000 Tickets at 10 Dols.

WITHOUT DEDUCTION.

To draw THREE times a week, and 1000 numbers each day. Prizes payable without deduction, Sixty days after the drawing is completed.

INTERNAL NAVIGATION, the object of the above scheme, must be allowed by all, to be of the highest importance to these United States and every good citizen must feel himself deeply interested on every intimation of undertakings, having Internal Improvement in view, being set on foot, and be desirous of aiding according to his abilities, towards the promotion thereof.

Under these impressions, the Commissioners in presenting the above Scheme to a generous public, feel a confidence of general and universal support and encouragement, but more particularly from their sister States, Pennsylvania, New-York, Delaware and Maryland; who, we may safely say, have never appealed in vain to their sister state of New-Jersey; but on the contrary, have been, and ever will be, generously supported by her, in the like and other improvements.

As to the Scheme, the commissioners have endeavoured to suit it to the circumstances of all The low price of tickets will preclude very few from an opportunity of securing an independence for life, or acquiring a very handsome remuneration for the trifle advanced.

The many rich prizes it contains, with the others, will all be paid without deduction at the Camden Bank, where the money received for the Tickets will be deposited immediately, for the sole use of the Lottery.

Although there are 25 Capital Stationary Prizes amounting to ☞ $67,500, one for each drawing day, yet there remain afloat as many large and valuable prizes, amounting to the sum of $152,500, as are generally to be met with in a whole Scheme, and the whole payable without any deduction therefrom. And for the accommodation of the fortunate adventurers in this Lottery, who may wish to receive their money immediately, a provision will be made at the said Bank for the payment of the prizes the VERY DAY they are drawn, on allowing the customary discount, as in Philadelphia or New-York.

The Lottery will be drawn in Camden, opposite the city of Philadelphia, and the Manager flatters himself that such encouragement will be given by a generous public as will enable him in the course of a very few weeks, to announce in the papers of the several states, the day the drawing will commence.

Contractors will be allowed a liberal discount.

OR PORTABLE KITCHENS.

MANUFACTURED and sold by HENRY MILLER & Co in 2d street, two doors from the corner of Wood streets, Pittsburgh.
